OLD COUNTRY ADVICE TO THE AMERICAN TRAVELLER

One day my Uncle Melik traveled to New York. Before his travel his Uncle Garro had paid him a visit and told him about the dangers of travel.

"When you get on the train", the old man said, "choose your seat carefully, sit down and do not look about".

"Yes, sir", my uncle said.

"When the train begins to move", the old man said, "two men wearing uniforms will come up to you and ask you for your ticket. Ignore them. They will be thieves".

"Then a young man will come to you and offer you a cigarette. Tell him you do not smoke. The cigarette will be poisoned".

"Yes, sir," my uncle said.

"On your way to the restaurant a beautiful young woman will run into you on purpose. She will be attractive, and your natural wish will be to become friends with her. Don't do this, go to the restaurant and eat. If she speaks, pretend to be deaf," the old man explained.

"On your way back to your seat from the restaurant", the old man said, "You will pass through the smoker. There you will find a game of cards in progress". The players will nod at you pleasantly and one of them will invite you to join the game.

Tell them "you don't speak English".

"Yes, sir", my uncle said.

"That's all", the old man said.

"Oh, one thing more", the old man recalled.
